DURHAM HIGH SCHOOL ALMA MATER

Words and music by J. Secrest 1964

We lift our voices loud and strong
We sing to thee our praise.
With hearts so loyal memories long
We'll not forget these days.
As time goes forward year by year,
We shall remember and hold dear
All the fine and noble thoughts we found
At dear old Durham High.

DURHAM HIGH SCHOOL
DURHAM, NORTH CAROLINA

DURHAM SCHOOL MESSENGER

In the book of hard facts a high school is defined as an educational institute for the academic betterment of the individual through routine juggling of the principles of reading, writing, and arithmetic. Durham High School has undoubtedly met the challenge of academic preparation, yet it has become a symbol of far more than ordered layers of brick encompassing myriads of neatly bound pages. It is five hundred umbrelias crammed into the cold, wet mud of the county stadium with the hope of feeling the complete togetherness of victory. It is the inward satisfaction of belonging to the only high school who can shout "we're number one" and mean it. It is a fundamental step towards transforming the present dreams and aspirations of the individual into future reality.

STUDENT LIFE

Life at Durham High School offers many forms of activity enabling each student to participate in some phase of school life. The opening of school with the hisses and pranks on the unsuspecting Sophs . . . "Goldfinger" and the success of the Budget Drive . . . Fall Festival with rejuvenation and the crowning of the homecoming queen . . . "The Wizard of Id" . . . the new prestige acquired by the Juniors after receiving their class rings . . . the Christmas holidays and Santa's arrival with his bag of goodies . . . the extended

STUDENT COUNCIL

Leadership is the art of stimulating interest within the people and influencing them to work together toward common desirable goals. The Student Council is an organization dedicated to providing the student body with the best leadership possible. It helps in promoting an atmosphere conducive to the betterment of social, moral, physical, and intellectual standards. The Student Council is founded on the principal of centralized co-ordination of the opinions of many, by few. It is for this reason that this organization must consist of students who possess the highest standards of integrity and honor. The responsibilities of a student council member are serious and many, yet the satisfaction of having provided the student body with an efficient, democratic representation, is more than equal compensation.

STUDENT COUNCIL: FIRST ROW: Betsy Lawson, Martha Johnston, Sissel Johannessen, John Davis, Nancy Beard, Paula McGurk, Bobby Tyndall, Margot Beach, Mary Faeth Chenery, Page Moseley. INTERCLUB COUNCIL

The purpose of Interclub Council is to co-cordinate club activities and assist the individual clubs in all possible ways. It is also the responsibility of the Interclub Council to sponsor a club day and a fair in order to better acquaint the students with each club's functions. It plays a vital part in the organizations of Durham High School.

MESSENGER

STAFF OF 1966

Carol Skinner, Literary; Gina Tyor, Editor; Mr. Stars, Advisor; Maria Carr, Photography.

Carolyn Vaughan, Barbara Bressler, Gayle Rogers.

The midnight oil candles sputter once, then twice, and finally resign to effervescence as the '66 MESSENGER Staff toils late into the night at slumber parties and then manages to resume labors during first period the following mornings. Our precision typists PECK PECK stop correct, erase, P E C K PECK stop . . . to the strained m e l o d y of Hugh's autoharp seeping through the cracks under the door from the back room. Linda, Jill, Carol, and Marcia revert to synchronized typographical ballet to Margaret and Hugh's hootenanny.

The words MESSENGER and Layouts are synonymous. Gina musters Barbara and Gayle back into the staff room and teaches them their alphabet so that they can alphabetize the classes and pictures. But what's this?

Art Staff: Ann Jenkins, Carolyn Vaughan, Susie Brown,, Hugh Hall, Charles Gaillard, Cleo Leontis, Janet Martel.

Section Editors: Jill Faucette, Kaye Harris, Marcia King, Margaret Martin.

A seltzer-bottle fight . . . auf Deutsch? . . . (seems as if someone squirted green ink into Anne's banana. Really Anne. It's not that bad. Food coloring is edible. I said food . . . O well . . . "Was ist los?")

Meanwhile Margaret is still in the back room singing courageously even though the throng has deserted her except for Carl, and is watching the spider weave her web. "Big Daddy" alias, the fly, has caught Miss Elsie Smith in his loom. Spin. Weave. Thread. Spin. Weave. Janet has decided to compete with Miss Smith. Janet is considering teaching Underwater Basketweaving in night school. Now Kaye has decided to join Margaret in her song. The anthology has to be tapered to fit into the anthology section . . . reams and reams of picture identifications are yet to be retyped . . . arms, legs and legs and arms have to be cut by the porportion scale . . . what is Margaret singing? Why is the staff singing? They have co-operated as individuals with each other's ideas, suggestions, compromises, and revisions, and by their sustained efforts, have produced a yearbook representative of a Durham High School that we will not soon forget.

The Durham High School yearbook has received the encouragement and guidance of Mr. W. K. Stars since 1952, and through his continuing efforts to help us understand the significance and responsibility of a yearbook staff, we have achieved another hallmark in the tradition of the MESSENGER this year. Mr. Stars has proven himself an invaluable friend and counselor to the MESSENGER . . . his creativity and resourcefulness has opened new horizons in the preservation of a Durham High School memory that is representative of its student body and their activities throughout the school year. He has stimulated productive thinking in his students by application of the keynote "exhaust the possibilities" and has left all our former assumptions to be questioned and re-evaluated in a new light . . . in a comparative and critical set of values . . . and it is by this scrutiny that we are able to progress and perfect our efforts. Mr. Stars will remain dear to his students and Durham High School as a teacher whom we will never forget.

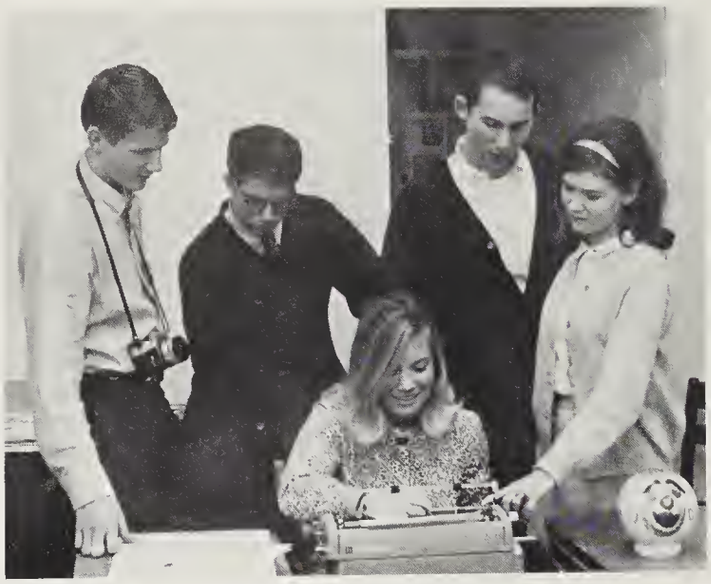
THE HI-ROCKET

EDITORIAL BOARD



EDITORIAL BOARD L. to R.: David Hayes—photographer, Ken Ross—editorial assistant, Kathy Davenport—editor, Lee Paterson—editorial assistant, Linda Griffith—News editor.

As a newspaper, the Hi-Rocket has no equal in all of Durham High School. Just as the Student Council has the responsibilty of administering the needs of the students, the Hi-Rocket must alone inform the student body. Considered to be one of the finest papers in the state, the Hi-Rocket not only maintained standards of the past but also established new ideals. The Editorial board soon became known as the most controversial board of recent times as it questioned all aspects of school life. Editorials ranging from the Interclub Council to Viet Nam found their way to its brilliant, courageous, scathing pages. Its satiric wit won it the title of "paper cutter." The Hi-Rocket, in short, is more than just a piece of paper; it is a piece of paper with ink on it.

FRENCH CLUB

OFFICERS, left to right: Linda Thaxton, treasurer; Betsy Bugg, Secretary; Lisa Wills, President; Johnny Cates, Vice-president; Mr. Walter Creech, Advisor.

The purpose of the French Club is to stimulate interest in the French language and customs. This object is reached through various films, speakers, traditional celebrations, and field trips. The French Club is circulating a newspaper among its members for the first time this year. An advantage is that it keeps the members informed of the activities of the club and encourages members to contribute creative work done in the French language.

LATIN CLUB

OFFICERS: Mrs. Marshall, Advisor; Elaine Patton, Vice President; Sarah Newton, President; Terri Weisner, Secretary; Chris Perry, Teasurer.

The Latin Club is composed of the Latin students of Durham High School who are interested in furthering their knowledge of the Latin language and the Roman culture. In the spring our activities are climaxed by a Roman banquet and "slave auction."

LATIN NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

PURPOSE: The Latin National Honor Society is an organization which recognizes students for excellence in the study of Latin and for service to the Latin Club. Members are elected from those students who have had three semesters of Latin and maintained an average of 90 or better!

SPANISH NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

The purpose of the Durham High School Chapter of the Spanish National Honor Society is to recognize high achievement in Spanish and to promote a continuing interest in the Hispanic studies in the community as well as Durham High School. Members are chosen on the basis of maintaining an honor average in the study of Spanish for at least three semesters. An induction ceremony is held each year at a regular meeting of the Pan-Am Club. At this time the new members are given a lighted candle and after all names are read, a pledge is repeated by the new members.

FUTURE HOMEMAKERS OF AMERICA

PURPOSE: The over-all goal of the organization is to help individuals improve personal, family and community living, now and in the future.

To emphasize specific parts of this over-all goal, Future Homemakers of America have eight purposes. They are:

1. To promote a growing appreciation of the joys and satisfactions of homemaking.
2. To emphasize the importance of worthy home membership.
3. To encourage democracy in home and community life.
4. To work for good home and family life for all.
5. To promote international good will.
6. To foster the development of creative leadership in home and community life.
7. To provide wholesome individual and group recreation.
8. To further interest in home economics.

PEP CLUB

The Pep Club was formed a few years ago to promote school spirit. We are interested in all student activities throughout the year. This year we decorated the goal posts, made banners and posters, sold streamers for the cars in the Homecoming Parade, and sold red and white beanies. The Pep Club has grown in the number of people and in the jobs it performs. We are hoping that it will continue to increase the spirit of the whole student body.

NORTH CAROLINA VOCATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CLUBS OF AMERICA

A National Youth Organization for Trade and Industrial Education Students

MOTTO

Preparing for Leadership in the World of Work

The Shield Represents Patriotism

The shield denotes belief in democracy, liberty and the American way of life.

The Torch Represents Knowledge

The flaming torch reflects the light of knowledge which dispels the darkness of ignorance. In the light of the torch progress will be made toward the vocational goals of the individual.

The Orbital Circles Represent Technology

The circles present the challenge of modern technology, and the training needed to accept and master the challenge of new technical frontiers and the need for continuous education.

The Gear Represents the Industrial Society

The gear, symbolic of the industrial society denotes the interdependence and cooperation of the individual working together with labor and management for the betterment of mankind.

THE PLEDGE

UPON MY HONOR, I Pledge

To prepare myself by diligent study and ardent practice to become a worker whose services will be recognized as honorable by my fellow workers,

To base my expectations of reward upon the solid foundation of service,

To honor and respect my vocation in such a way as to bring repute to myself,

And further, to spare no effort in upholding the ideals of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America.

The Hands Represent Youth

The hands portray a search for knowledge and the desire to acquire a skill. In the process to attain knowledge and skill the individual will develop a respect for the dignity of work and become a productive and responsible citizen.

THE CREED

I BELIEVE IN THE DIGNITY OF WORK—I hold that mankind has advanced to his present culture through the intelligent use of his hands and mind. I shall maintain a feeling of humbleness for the knowledge and skills that I receive from craftsmen, and I shall conduct myself with dignity in the work I do.

I BELIEVE IN THE AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE—I know our culture of today is the result of the freedom of action and opportunities won by our American forefathers, and I will uphold their ideals.

I BELIEVE IN EDUCATION — I shall endeavor to make the best use of the knowledge, skill, and experience that I learn in school in order that I may become a better workman in my chosen occupation and a better citizen in my community. To this end I will continue my learning both in and out of school.

I BELIEVE IN FAIR PLAY—I shall through honesty and fair play respect the rights of my fellowman. I shall always conduct myself in the manner of the best craftsmen in my occupation, and treat those with whom I work as I would like to be treated.

I BELIEVE SATISFACTION IS ACHIEVED BY GOOD WORK — I feel that compensation and personal satisfaction received for my work and services will be in proportion to my creative and productive ability.

I BELIEVE IN HIGH MORAL AND SPIRITUAL STANDARDS — I shall endeavor to conduct myself in such a manner as to set an example for my fellowman by living a wholesome life and by fulfilling my responsibilities as a citizen of my community.

THESPIAN PLAYERS

THESPIAN PLAYERS

OFFICERS: Seated: Margaret Hudson, Publicity; Carol Lougee, Secretary; Debbie Miller, Treasurer. Standing: Richard Worster, President. Absent: Lee Kirsch, Vice-president; Mrs. Jeanne Noble, Advisor.

PURPOSE: To promote interest in the theatre as an art form by creating an outlet for the talents of the students and by building an intelligent audience through the presentation of examples of good theatre.

TRI-M

PURPOSE: The student who chooses to enrich his life with music must realize the unique importance of music in a well-balanced program for education. If music is not to be pushed aside or regarded as of lesser value than the vaunted athletic, science, vocational, or other subjects, it is the musician himself who must take the responsibiliy for making the music education program in the school a vital and compelling influence. The purpose of the national music honor society, Modern Music Masters, is to do just that.

MARCHING BAND

DURHAM HIGH SCHOOL BAND — Genuine quality is something not often achieved — there is always the quality presumed by familiarity: a mother always sees quality in her son, a school in its team — only infrequently in school life does the artistry of a group rise into authentic mastery. One such organization is the Durham High School Band.

The Marching Band met many similar (in purpose) organizations during the course of the football season, and, like the team it supported, never met its equal.

The Wind Ensemble is considered by most to be among the two or three finest concert bands in the state. This assumption has been substantiated by the achievement of its sixth consecutive Superior at state contests last year in Greensboro. It was one of three bands to receive three superior ratings from each of its three judges. One of the judges accorded the group a 1+, the rating only rarely given at contests.

The members of this group are among the finest musicians—both in talent and spirit—in the state; the satisfaction that comes from producing unequalled excellency is theirs, the pride of mutual achievement is theirs.

When looking back on our high school days we will recall many things we did that got us no great distance, things that taxed our energy to seemingly no avail, activities that spoke only for our idleness—but we will also remember being a part of the Wind Ensemble.

CLASS OF 1966

As each day brings us closer to the scrolls of white paper and the regal blue robes, we, the Senior Class of 1966, review the past 3 years and look toward the future. From each of us there is a different reaction, yet we feel as a whole the unity and spirit that made this year truly a Senior year. Once the newness of being "Seniors" had worn off, we proved our merit by winning the Budget Drive, with little competition. This winning spirit, so well begun in September, gained momentum and carried us through a great and memorable year. Soon Homecoming Week was upon us, and hasty but thorough preparations were in full swing, with committees and individuals all functioning on schedule. It was this same week that misfortune attacked our president in the form of appendicitis; however, co-operation, leadership, and hard work from all, especially the vice-president, brought us through with fine accomplishments. With high spirits and sharp wit, the Bulldogs of Durham High conquered the Fayetteville Bulldogs, both at the rejuvenation and the game. Half-time festivities found Janet Jones crowned Homecoming Queen, climaxing a day of pep rallies, and beauties. The fun and hard work of rehearsals was rewarded by a successful presentation of the Senior play. The outstanding efforts of the 1965-66 Student Council, headed by Bobby Tyndall, brought recognition to DHS in many ways, all of them examples of dedication and service. All of these wonderful but bygone events are indelibly imprinted in our memories as we anxiously await the phrase, "By the authority vested . . ." It is for these memories that we would like to give our sincerest thanks to our advisors, Mrs. Cooper and Mrs. Ridenhour, for their service, devotion, and guidance.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

"We are number one!" The school band playing; the cheerleaders doing cute cheers; confetti filling the air. The number one football team made another touchdown. I am proud of my school and its great football and basketball teams. I can never forget the excited atmosphere in the games, especially in the homecoming game. I felt like Cinderella in the royal palace.

I will always be grateful to all my teachers and schoolmates who made my year in Durham High the most wonderful experience.

I will miss all the friendly, smiling people shouting "terve" ("hi" in Finnish) or "Hyvaa Huomenta" ("good morning") even though it happened to be afternoon in the halls.

I appreciate the opportunity to see the Student Council working. I got many good ideas to take to my school in Finland.

Thank you, marching band, for your surprise to me. There are no words to describe my feelings when I heard you playing "Finlandia".

Thanks, Durham High School, you sure are a nice school!

Paivi Kotiaho.

JUNIOR CLASS OFFICERS

CLASS OF 1967

The class officers, David Rigsbee, president, Buddy Daniel, vice-president, Carolyn Foushee, secretary, and Wilma Harris, treasurer, led the class to new precedents during 1965-66. With the able and cooperative assistance of our advisor, Mr. Wall, we were able to take genuine pride in our projects knowing that we had the backing and spirit to carry us through.

Our first mammoth project was the Junior Talent Show, "The Wizard of Id". The organization, production, and acts made the Talent Show the most exciting event of the year. As we swept off the last remnants of sets and placards announcing the "Wizard," we suddenly and joyfully realized that we had money—lots of it! Instead of having any feelings about seeing it go, we looked forward to making it bring equal success to our next big project.

Our next experience was the unforgettable Christmas gift — our class rings. The little symbolic "headknockers" seemed to make the spirit for spring and the Junior-Senior Prom jell into one unified expression of spirit and pride. As expected, we turned the Junior-Senior Prom into a masterful evening honoring the Seniors, to whom it was most certainly unforgettable also.

The projects and representation of the class by its outstanding members made us ready to advance to the highest rank with shining colors.

Our first year at Durham High School has ended, and what a year it was! It's hard to believe that as much could happen in one year.

It all began with orientation week and the hisses of the upperclassmen in assembly. How can we ever forget the confusing maze of buildings or the many new faces? In spite of everything, we finally became a part of the school.

Our first business at Durham High School was electing officers. We chose Fred Adair, president; Jimmy Sharpe, vice-president; Cindy Woods, secretary; and Marian Stone, treasurer. Our first Budget Drive was fun, even though we had to watch the senior class president, Phil Ray, paint Fred Adair gold, in keeping with the theme, "Goldfinger." We resolved to win next year. Homecoming Week was filled with excitement — the Rejuvenation, the parade, a thrilling game, the Homecoming Court, with our lovely representative, Miss Diana Parrish, and the Homecoming dance.

Sophomores were active in all the facets of school life. During the fall our class sold football tags before each game. Several Sophomores were also members of our great football team, which was undefeated and untied. Under the competent leadership of our advisors, Mrs. Noble and Miss Lipscomb, we organized the sophomore dance, our class project.

One wonderful year has ended but there are two more ahead. We look forward eagerly, knowing these years will be the happiest of our lives.

ANTHOLOGY

ADAGIO

I walk into night,
Thoughts, headed nowhere,
Drowned in tears.
An oncoming swish, a rustle,
Enclose me—
Leaves despair to the wind
And storm.
Lightly, ever so sweetly, the World drapes me with its Bitter tears.
The moon, a clouded eye,
Beckons mine
As I walk on
Into the night.

—Terry Boyarsky

THE BLUIT BALLOON

I think I could never keep my blue balloon,
for though its string twines round
my hand, and begs release to breeze,
The muse is but impulsive;
I must keep my balloon so tightly wound
that wind would never find it,
that it would never think of soaring higher, than the heights I pull it through;
Once, I pulled it tighter and felt the strain in hand, its heart so innocent as yours once was, and I let go to watch it for a moment leave me behind,
I think I could never keep my blue balloon
for it deserves a freedom
I never gave to you.

THE TIGER

There is a tiger.

It is hiding under that bush.

Let me hear you growl, mean ferocious tiger.

Well..... growl!

Stop looking at me with those GA-REEN eyes.

You have yellow fur.

Where are your stripes?

Hidden under all that YELLLL-LOW fur.

Come on and show me your claws.

I can't see your teeth because you've closed your mouth.

Open your mouth and scare me.

Well..... open it and show me your TEEEETH!

Tiger, let me give you a piece of SOOUUND advice.

Stop hiding under that BUUSH.

TIME

We walked through life's happiest months together,
Hand in hand . . . . . heart in heart.
Living as one; breathing as one.
Touching perfection—away from sorrow and doubt.
Captured was love and happiness—
Banished—hate and sadness.
True love lasts until the end of time.
Mine did.
Now my time is gone.

—Debbie Burgoon

THE FEELINGS OF WAR

See the faithful banners,
And know the wanted cry.
  The heroes die in numbers,
And the women wonder why.
  Do not ye parents tremble,
That your sons have gone to war.
  Hear ye not the man of death?
He stands knocking at your door.
But think ye not of the sorrow,
  And feel ye not the pain.
Though your hearts are dipped in marrow,
They crack beneath the strain.
  But think also not people of
    your royal sons at birth,
  But know ye now that the dead
    are equal here on earth.
Now; silent, all ye people.
For hear ye not the moan.
  For it was not the thunder,
But more a fearsome groan.
And tomorrow when the rolls are called,
Another short 'twill be.
And whoever will be next I hope,
That it will not be me.
Such is the result of anger,
  And for such I shall die.
But I am thankful for one truth;
    No one for me
      will cry.

ENSCONCED

It was a cold, crisp, clear winter evening; even the sun seemed frozen on the horizon. The trees were boney, gnarled hands clawing the sky and on their finger-tips, birds called. All the remains of nature of the year past lay rotting on the ground. The world outside was very still; it seemed almost frozen, inanimate. The wind blew strong, cold, swift; bringing snow to make a shiny grave for the reincarnation of Spring. The nights were long, moody; nights to keep you by the fire thinking, nights to chill you to the bone and stir your mind of thoughts, nights to keep you waiting and waiting for Spring and winter to end. Winter brought long nights of coseiness when the world was no wider than your bedroom or fireplace.

—Kenneth Parker

ENCOUNTER

You sit on the park bench
Alone
Pondering, remembering, reliving
The past.
The park is alive
With youth and spring
But you, old woman, sit there
Cold and immobile.
Children shriek in joyous play,
Music to thine ears.
You were once like them,
In love with life.
You think of him now
For he was life to you.
Gone forever, alas, eternal death.
Do not shed your tears just now
For the children will not understand.
They may laugh and find it odd
For you to sadden their happy day.
Tomorrow and tomorrow
You shall return here.
And why, what cause is there to find
In old remembrances?
I see only pain and loveliness.
You smile and shake your head at me.
So must have I to learn,
And sitting someday upon a bench,
I will remember you.

—Margot Beach

Elementals

The city shimmered in the moonlight.
She walked on, from street to street,
Under the glare of endles lights.
She walked on, from street to street,
nameless streets,
And the bare corner lights made the dirty
pavement glisten,
But only in a small circle.
The city after the rain, she thought.
Mist hung in the air and blurred
The dirt, and the tired faces watching,
Endlessly watching from broken windows.
The mist made it easier and there were always
The circles of sparkling, wet light
That led her, not gently, to the water's edge.
The silver train sped her over the green hills.
O the green hills, with flowers tingling
And great white clouds trying to flee
from the sun,
But never succeeding.
Here is the real world, she thought,
As she felt the grass and water beneath her feet.
She lay down on the top of a hill
And watched the clouds and listened to the flowers and the earth.
From joy she closed her eyes.
The sea lapped noisily at the edge.
She knew the boat would be coming soon.
She would have to smile and talk politely.
For who could knew her sorrow?
Only those who know the green hills.
Ah, the glittering circles . . .
Even though the mist fades
There would always be the glittering circles
And the green hills.
She could see forever from the top.
She could see the city, far away.
It looked like a golden castle,
But she knew, she knew.
She knew also about the silver circles
of light.
From joy she closed her eyes.

Learning to love snow

Snow falls
inside of me.
great, lonely trees
stretch bared branches
to a blank sky.
a cold wind utters
a hoarse cry of anguish;
and still gently,
snow falls.
It is a winter night.
Outside
a street lamp
sheds light
on a wet street.
and,
through the pale glow
of the street lamp
snow drifts downward
whispering.
cool snowflakes
perishing silently
in the warmth of my palm.
Icicles
hanging from the eaves
sparkling like jewels
The brilliant blue sky
is full of cold sunshine
The world is a jewel box
and it is still snowing
Grouped in a classroom
we watch the window
while the voice drones on.
the brooding iron sky

has not changed
since dawn;
a cool wind
stirs the air
and pure snowflakes
flutter to the ground
like lost angels.
fallen in a snowdrift
I laugh
and cover myself with snow
It stings,
tingles.
I make a ball
and throw it at a tree—
the world of trouble
smashed at a blow.
The snow
sparkles in the sunlght.
The world is dynamic wind-filled
cold.
The snow has ceased to fall.
Look,
over still white fields
two blackbirds
carreening in a white sky.
Overnight
the trees have stood bearing up the snow
the snow which has fallen into their branches.
Dawn begins.
slowly the light breaks forth illuminating the whole earth.
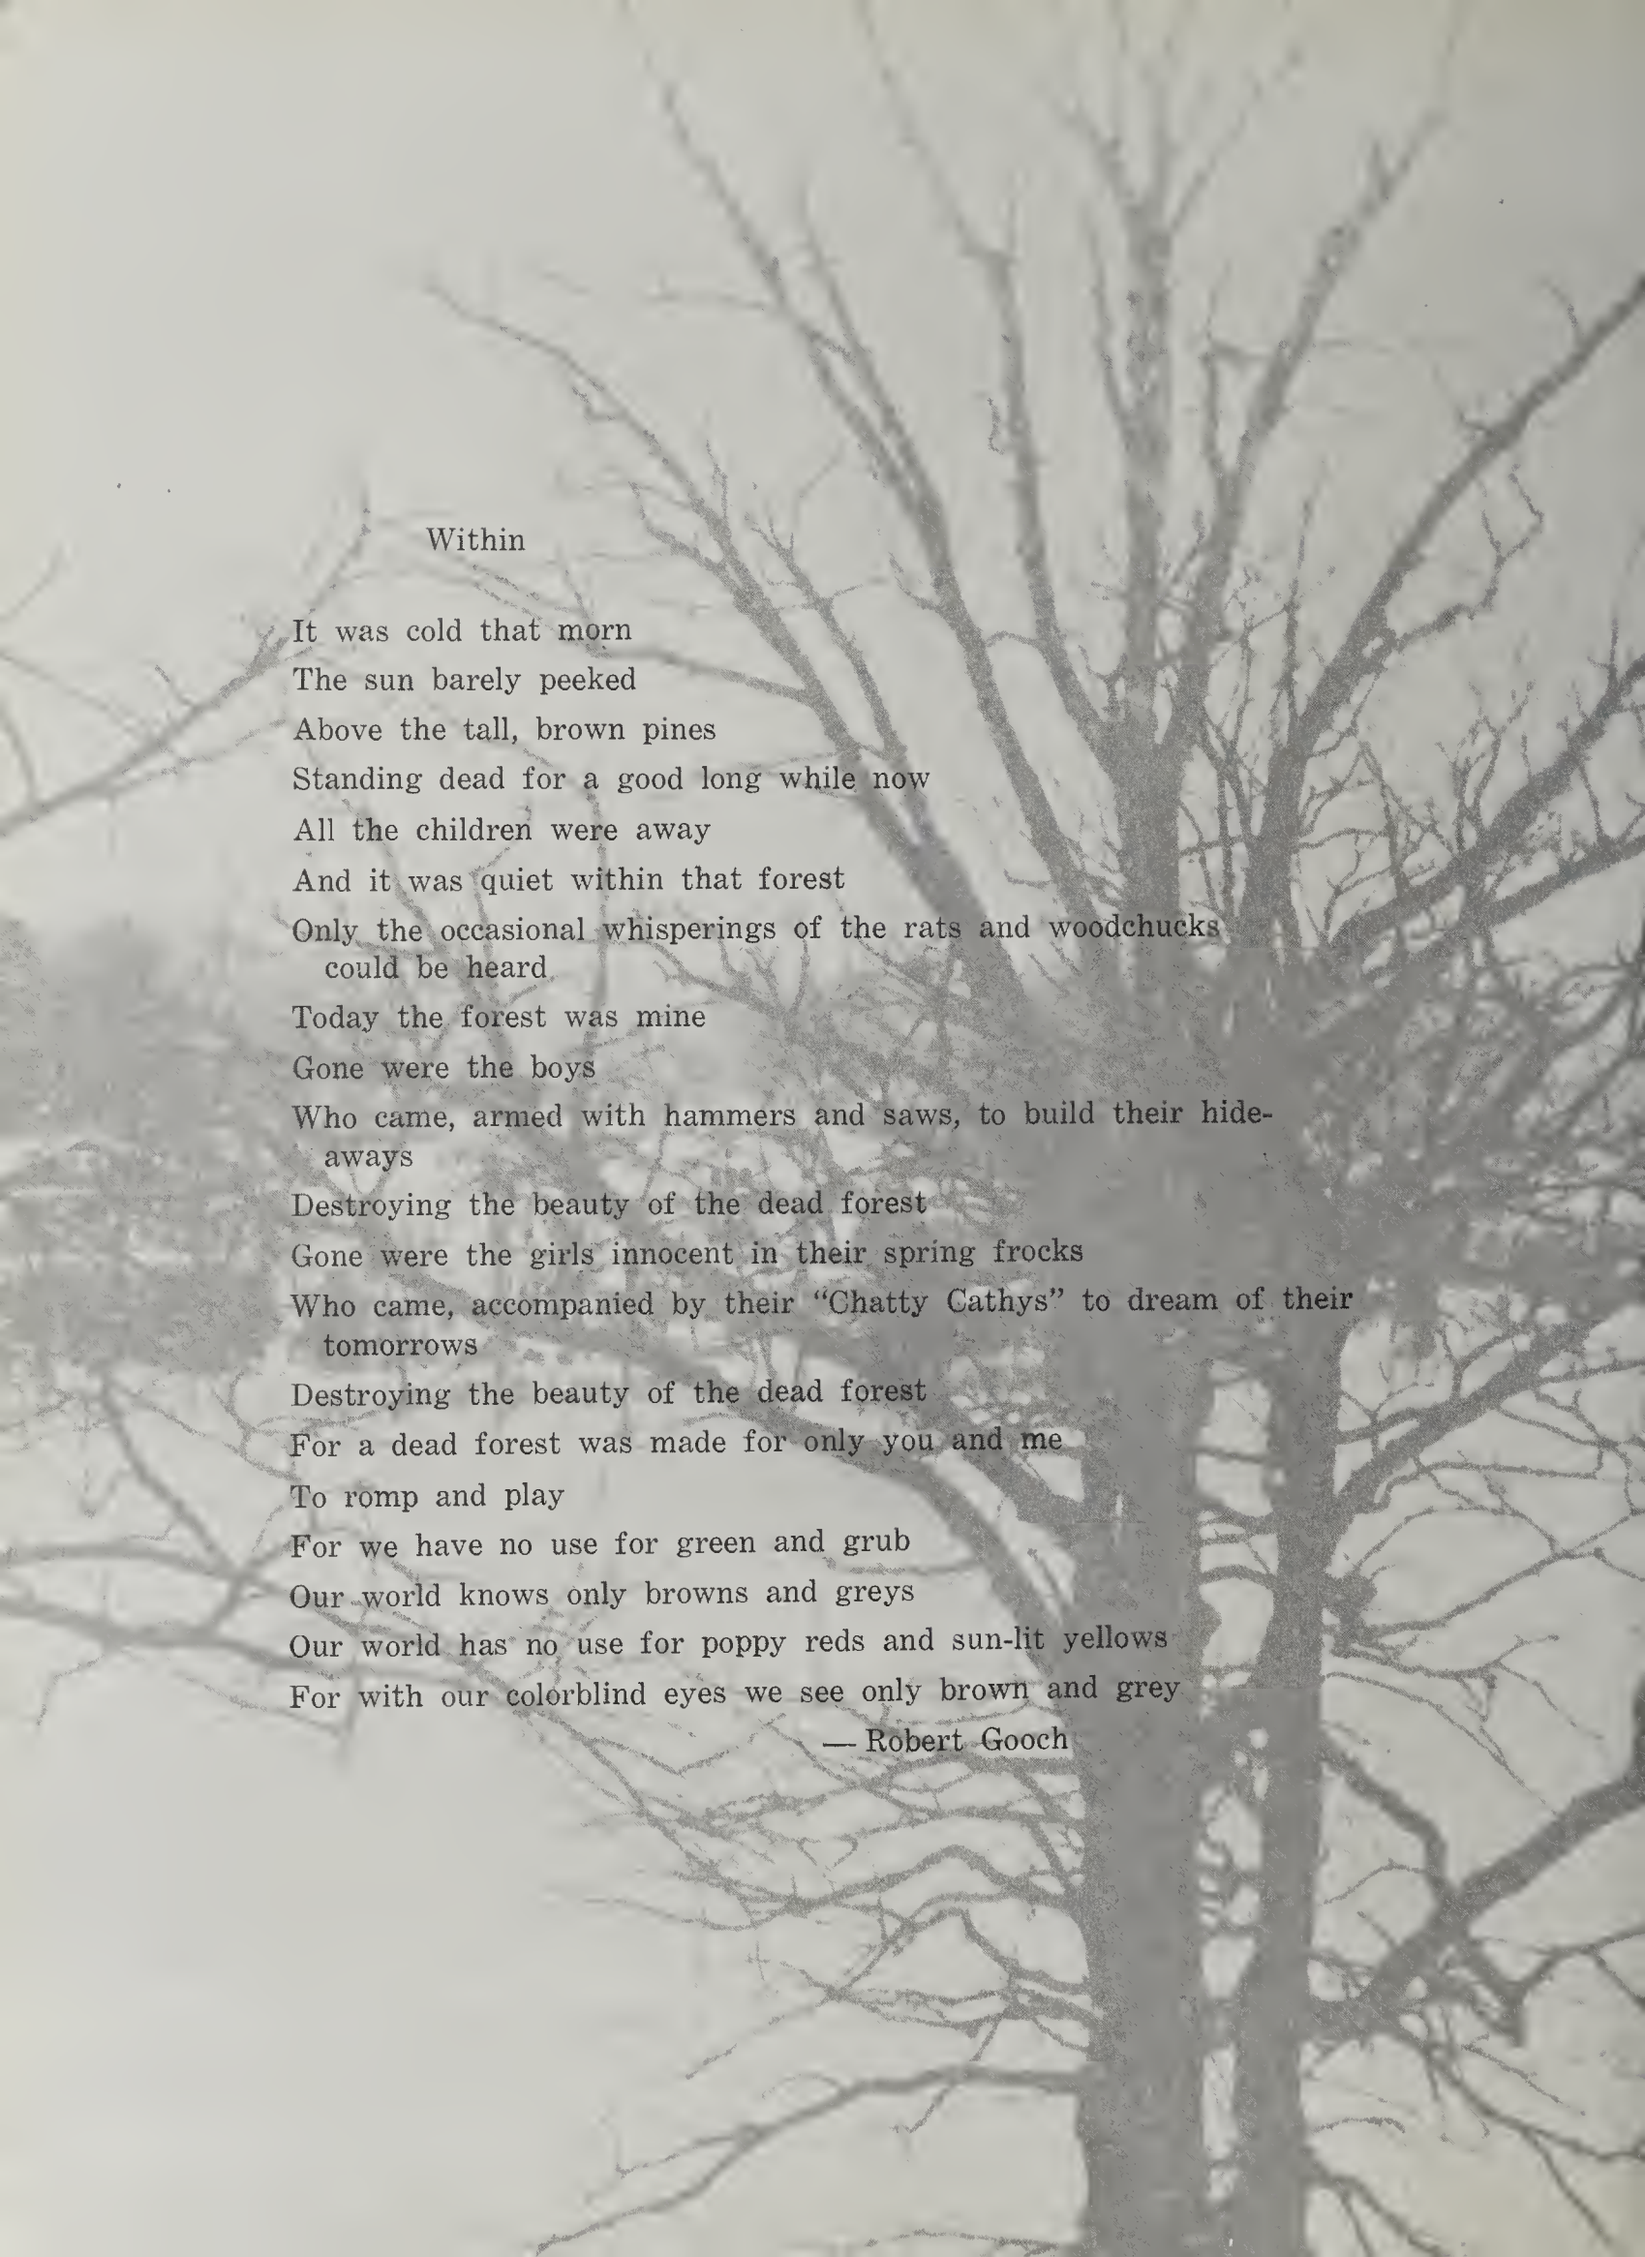
This is the day
which will destroy the snow.

—Susan Hills



Within

It was cold that morn
The sun barely peeked
Above the tall, brown pines
Standing dead for a good long while now
All the children were away
And it was quiet within that forest
Only the occasional whisperings of the rats and woodchucks could be heard
Today the forest was mine
Gone were the boys
Who came, armed with hammers and saws, to build their hide-aways
Destroying the beauty of the dead forest
Gone were the girls innocent in their spring frocks
Who came, accompanied by their "Chatty Cathys" to dream of their tomorrows
Destroying the beauty of the dead forest
For a dead forest was made for only you and me
To romp and play
For we have no use for green and grub
Our world knows only browns and greys
Our world has no use for poppy reds and sun-lit yellows
For with our colorblind eyes we see only brown and grey

UPSTAIRS AND DOWN

Carolyn Vaughan

He hurried along in their swarm, adding his own voice to the chorus that trailed on down the long hall. The hall ended and he found himself next in line to the outside door and lunged against the metal guard railing as the boy in front had just done. There was a freshness in the air — a clean smell of the earth that intensified the cold of the afternoon, and which seemed to linger just before each snow of winter. He remembered first sensing it earlier that morning, when he had strolled to breakfast in the early light of dawn. The air had been pregnant with the rich smell of dirt and evergreen and had made him feel clean and refreshed to even breathe the heavy morning air.

He glanced up and saw snow drifting lazily as if from the chapel tower overhead. The light of the afternoon sun gleamed on the tower and glistened on the column of snow that swirled down its side. Soon the drift had gained momentum and thin sheets of snow furled around him as he headed back to the dormitory. He glimpsed a few of his classmates crouched behind a parked car, and forgetting his need to study, he packed a snowball and hastily tossed it in the direction of the ambushers. The shot fell short. Immediately he was bombarded by a storm of snowballs from the opposite side. He managed to duck all but the last one, which struck him squarely on the neck. Laughing as the icy trickle slithered down his body, he waved goodheartedly to the pack of howling boys, and continued back to the dormitory to study.

As he neared the top of the stairs he listened to the grating sound his boots made on the cement stairs, scraping on the outer edges of the steps where the cement was abrasive and scuffing in the sunken middle portions of each step, worn smooth and polished to the shape of half-moons. He heard the basement door bang open and the metal guard rail snap with the energy of a tightly wound spring mechanism. He perceived a splintered yelp of laughter from the grounds outside the basement door before the door itself slammed into place. At the top of the stairs, he hesitated before the door for several moments, questioning the need of closing himself off from the outside activty of the late afternoon. In another moment, he was inside peeling off his wet clothing and changing into a pair of soiled white levies. He scanned around his room for a place to throw the clothing. He had cluttered the unmade bed with several dirty shirts and ties which he had not found time to hang up. The writing table displayed an assortment of paperback books and filled ashtrays. He held the shirt until he was certain that there was no place to drape it and then dropped it on the floor, casually stepping over it and seating himself before the black desks of books. He looked back at the shirt and noticed that dust and cigarette ashes from several weeks still coated the floor. There never seemed to be time to do anything but study and read, and read and study. He could sweep the floor tomorrow, he thought, and dismissed the wet shirt from his mind.

He could hear the wind gently scaling snow against his window, brushing the crumbs of snow into the window ledge and coating the corners of each paned square of glass with triangular patches of snow, like cobwebs. The snow seemed to come from nowhere, and never stopped coming. Out there, he thought, in the snow, there were no books to read and no lessons to study. Echoes of the shouting boys floated back to him and filled the silence of the lonely room.

He jerked the BULL OF MINOS out from the bottom of the pile of books with the finesse of a magician, opened it to the bookmark and began reading slowly to himself:

> "In one of these the water comes up hot; steam rises from it and hangs about the smoke above a blazing fire. But the other, even in summer gushes up as cold as air or freezing snow or water that has turned to ice."

He raised his eyes from the book and stared out the window, listening to his mind repeat the passage again and again like a tiny voice inside him that taped back his thought. The snow in the passage had become somewhat blurred and as if to renew its importance, he carefully watched the pattern of snow falling down by his window to the campus below.

Groups of students were walking in the quadrangle below with newspapers draped on their heads to protect them from the sleet and snow. A few nearer the bus stop twirled their black umbrellas into the wind like tiny windmills in the storm of white. The campus bus rounded the quadrangle, inching up like a glowworm as it approached the corner, and then hesitating as if awaiting the rest of its fat yellow body to catch up with its head. Suddenly it veered around the corner and extended with its body a stream of grey exhaust that trailed from its path, clouding the perfect white fog in its settling film. The white maze continued to hold him in a trance. Through the window he watched it sift carelessly over the walkways on the campus below and melt the hint of a skyline. He sat with his feet propped on the trashcan in front of his black desk for a long time, watching the silent sky fall white before him. The book in his lap no longer interested him. He regarded it as the one thing that stood between him and his daydream of snow. He wanted to get out in the snow and just walk until he felt like not walking anymore.

The evening darkness greyed with the continuous infiltration of snow and became a strain on his eyes. He closed the book with an air of defeat and shuffled over to his unmade bed. He sank into the soft resiliant mattress and felt the places that he was lying on warm under his body. He tried not to move to the edges of the cold dry sheet that made him shiver when he touched them with his bare skin. He kicked his shoes off, and pulling the covers up thick around his neck, he turned over once, then twice, before finally drifting off to sleep.

A NOTE TOO MANY

Mary Faeth Chenery

Often have been the times that I have looked up into his face and wondered what kind of agony, what kind of pain could create this majesty and distinction. So too have I wondered what battles in his mind at these times. I see in his eyes that which is artistry. His is not the molding of men but the molding of men's souls. His is music.

Those eyes are not the kind one sees upon looking into his face. But once they are sought out from amongst the years, they cannot be forgotten. Although I have seen them and sought them, I do not know their color, only knowing them to be the center of his face, and radiant. The kind of look that comes from these eyes is, if he were to regard someone he truly loved, one which expresses the understanding that for someone else would require a touch.

So I see him tonight, and though I am but several feet away, I cannot speak to him. Nor can I see his eyes, nor can anyone see them, for he is here and his soul away. He is tearing from those who believe in him, the hearts, as if they were his sustenance. And though he has mine, I do not miss it, except that it hurts me. I feel the nonexistence of self, for without a heart, I am without life. Nor do I miss life, for I live in him, and in his creation. Can you not hear the music, the music of fifty hearts swept together by his hands; those hands that shake under fear, not worry, but fear? Those are the hands that provoke from the strongest man a cry of anguish and make from this man the gentlest Christian; they send the gods a-begging; and their power makes me close my eyes and turn my back. For no man has the right to create such beauty; and if it is not a man, then no mortal has a right to see it. This fear is one which can destroy, although it has but once overtaken him; and he, being torn by each of us, spoke the gentlest words, saying that he forgave for being young.

Surely he must feel or have felt as I have, that when music is as perfect and beautiful as I have heard, my whole body, the organ of my soul, becomes too small for me. I beg to be allowed to escape. Permit me to surge into this phrase — even my heart is pounding, my mind screams, I would cry if I might surrender to the oneness which calls me. It whistles a gentle call to which I desire to respond. My body is not large enough for that which I feel.

Yet he, too, must feel it; this must be his anguish. And when he steps down, though there may not be silence around him, it is there above him, and it is where he has been. And when I find his eyes again, there are no years, there is triumph and unbelievable majesty. I know that he, he alone, found his way out and above; and he did it with the hearts of many. There are none who could fill that space where he stood and where silence now reigns; he is still there, and shall be. Perhaps it is that we have played a note too many . . .

The Loven

This serenity marks the end
each minute is gathered a deadly pollen
the moments of quiet paradise create the illusion
while we dry the blue-pool of tears
we can't produce the truth or falsify the actual just play the role.

—Chuck Cooper

From One, The Other

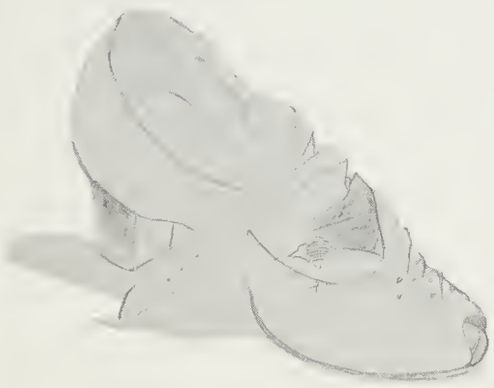
by Kenneth Wayne Parker

Out of the darkness I see the light,
But one is the other if blinding is light.
Out from the bad I see the good,
But one is the other if misunderstood.
Far from war, there is sweet peace,
But one is the other if peace is of war.
Far from weakness there is strength,
But one is the other if man doesn't think.

VOID

Empty infinitude, infinite emptiness.
Shapeless, boundless mass of nothing.
Dead and has never lived.
Fiery darkness, eternity personified,
Intangiblity in limitless captivity.
Meant to be pierced by radiance
And probed by the minds of men.

—David Fein



This is Mrs. Parker.
She is an English teacher.
She is very pretty.
To be as old as she is.
She is another one of those teachers with many talents.
What is Mrs. Parker's "Great nature's second course."
Producing plays, what else
She also directs them
And is her own stagemanager,
And make-up artist,
And critic.
She does all the work and gets no credit.

See Mrs. Boone
Her friends call her Miz. B.
"B" is for Boone
The A.V. boys find a variety of names for the lovable Miz. B.
Mrs. Boone is everybody's friend.
Except when she loscs her temper and throws everybody out of the library.
Or when shc keeps everybody locked out because it isn't time to open the library yet.
Or when she runs her hose trying to put a 3 inch wide book into a 2 inch wide space on a bottom shelf.
Miz. B. takes grcat pleasurer in re-arranging the reference shelf.
The books arc just like old friends to Miz. B.
Except when a shelf-full of them slips loose and lands on her foot.
Then Miz. B. has a variety of names for her old friends.

See Mrs. Rogers
Note the intense expression on her face.
Note the rhythmic pace of her stride
Not the flip of the head every third step.
Note the grip she has on that object in her hand.
But wait!
What is that object?
It looks like an arm.
It is an arm.
On the other end of that arm is a student.
Note the look of horror in the student's face.
Note the tears welling in the student's eyes
Note the way the student limps along in agony.
But Mrs. Rogers isn't trying to hurt anybody.
She is just enforcing the rules.
Note the student's hand.
It's turning blue.

See Mrs. Wiggins
She is a Spanish teacher.
Accented o, a-s-t-e, Accented a, a-m-o-s, accented a-i-s, accented a-n.
That is a Spanish lesson in dactylic and spondaic hexameter.
You'd better go take a B.C.

See Mrs. George
Mrs. George is a very nice teacher.
You can tell that by looking at her.
She has a very good sense of humor.
I hope
She is always taking wise comments from her students
Like Tommy Day, for instance
But Tommy Day doesn't learn anything in class
Neither does anyone else, for that matter
Why doesn't anyone learn anything
See Mrs. Gorge's face
See Mrs. George's figure
I hope Mr. George has a good sense of humor.

See Mr. Toan
No, that is not a halo of light ahove his head
That is his head.
Mr. Toan has a very shining personality.
Except when he wears his hat.
What is that noise?
It could be a hydrogen explosion.
It could be Mr. Toan yelling at one of his classes.
But it isn't.
It is one of his ties.
Make noise, ties, make noise.
One day you will not be so loud.
One day Mr. Toan might not wear a tie.
If we are lucky.

See Mrs. Alexander
She is standing at the front of the room
It is the beginning of the class.
Mrs. Alexander is talking quietly
Soon she will be talking loudly
Then she will be yelling
But it is no use.
The louder she talks, the louder the class will talk to be heard above the noise she is making.
At the end of the class she will just stand there.
And smile
And smile
And smile
Soon the bell will ring
Soon she won't have to listen to the noise
Soon she will stop teaching altogether
Soon the men in the little white coats will come to take her away.

See Coach Minyard
I don't know what he is
He is the strong, silent type.
In study hall, for instance.
"Allright, sit down and shut up 'for I give you a knockle sandwich!"
That's his teacher side
His coach side is much better
At the end of a gym class, for instance.
"Who's gonna win the game tonight?"
"State."
"Go take a shower ... Who's gonna win the game tonight?"
"Carolina!"
"Ten laps!"
His coach side and his teacher side are his good sides.
But his back side is his biggest side.

See Coach Jones
He is a History teacher.
I think.
He is also a coach.
I think.
But there is one thing Coach Jones can't do.
He can't chaperon trips.
That band trip to New York, for instance.
On the way up, Coach Jones was in the front seat of the bus.
On the way back, Coach Jones was in the front seat of the bus.
But while we were in New York, Coach Jones was nowhere to be found.
We looked uptown for him.
We looked downtown for him.
We looked everywhere for him.
But there were some places we couldn't look.
Why couldn't we look in those places?
Because no one in the band was 21 yet.
I wonder where Coach Jones was.

See Mrs. Ervin
She is a math teacher
She teaches sophomores the fundamentals of geometry.
She teaches juniors the fundamentals of algebra.
She teaches some studcnts the fundamentals of debate.
Funny how she always wins the arguments.
She is a very talented teacher.
But that is not all she can do
Oh, no.
She taught the GAA how to play basketball.

See Mr. Stars
He is the art teacher
He should learn to be jolly or loose weight
He is very humorous, too
If you look at him from the right angle.
But don't let that intelligent grin fool you.
He isn't as smart as he looks.
After all, he let THIS thing get into the MESSENGER, didn't he?

This is the author
He is an angry young man.
Why is he angry?
He is angry because he is losing his beauty rest copying this thing over.
Find his picture and you will see that he has lost most of it already.
But that's not the only reason.
He is searching for his talent.
Search, angry young man, search.
One day you will find your talent.
It may be in the field of humor, who knows?
Although that is a debatable qucstion.

A BEDTIME STORY

Once upon a time there was a boy. The boy was different. His friends all went to the football, basketball, or whatever other game the school teams were engaged in. He stayed at home in his room and counted the flies as one by one they all died of old age. They said he had no school spirit. And so he walked home alone, kicking an empty beer can. He didn't care.

He wasn't studious by nature. Others, whom he deemed his intellectual inferiors passed him to take the honors he never missed. He was told that he could do better and win these awards for his very own. He half-smiled and turned towards the window where a bee was making the sign of the cross. He didn't care.

He wasn't friendless either. But on weekends he was alone because his friends were out socializing. He didn't know who was dating whom. He didn't know where everyone was going. Sometimes, with a pack of lifesavers in his pocket, he would go to the movies. Alone. And he would lose himself in the dustier corners of the book store where, amidst the mouse droppings, he fingered ancient paper. Where the dust left off and the book began, he couldn't tell. But it felt warm and dry. And it was quiet. Sometimes he went to the library. He would pass friends on their way to wherever. He didn't care.

Once, also, there was a girl. Or rather there were a number of girls. They walked down the same streets, saw the same buildings, and breathed the same air. Some even were or pretended to be sympathetic to the cause he didn't have. He was petted and kissed ever so lightly amid shrill giggles. He felt their warm bodies against his and listened to their real or imagined thoughts. He shrugged his shoulders and went off down the hall. He didn't care.

One day he went home after school and locked himself up in his room. He put his books on his desk. He lay down on his bed and stared at the empty ceilng. It was very quiet. All the flies were dead.

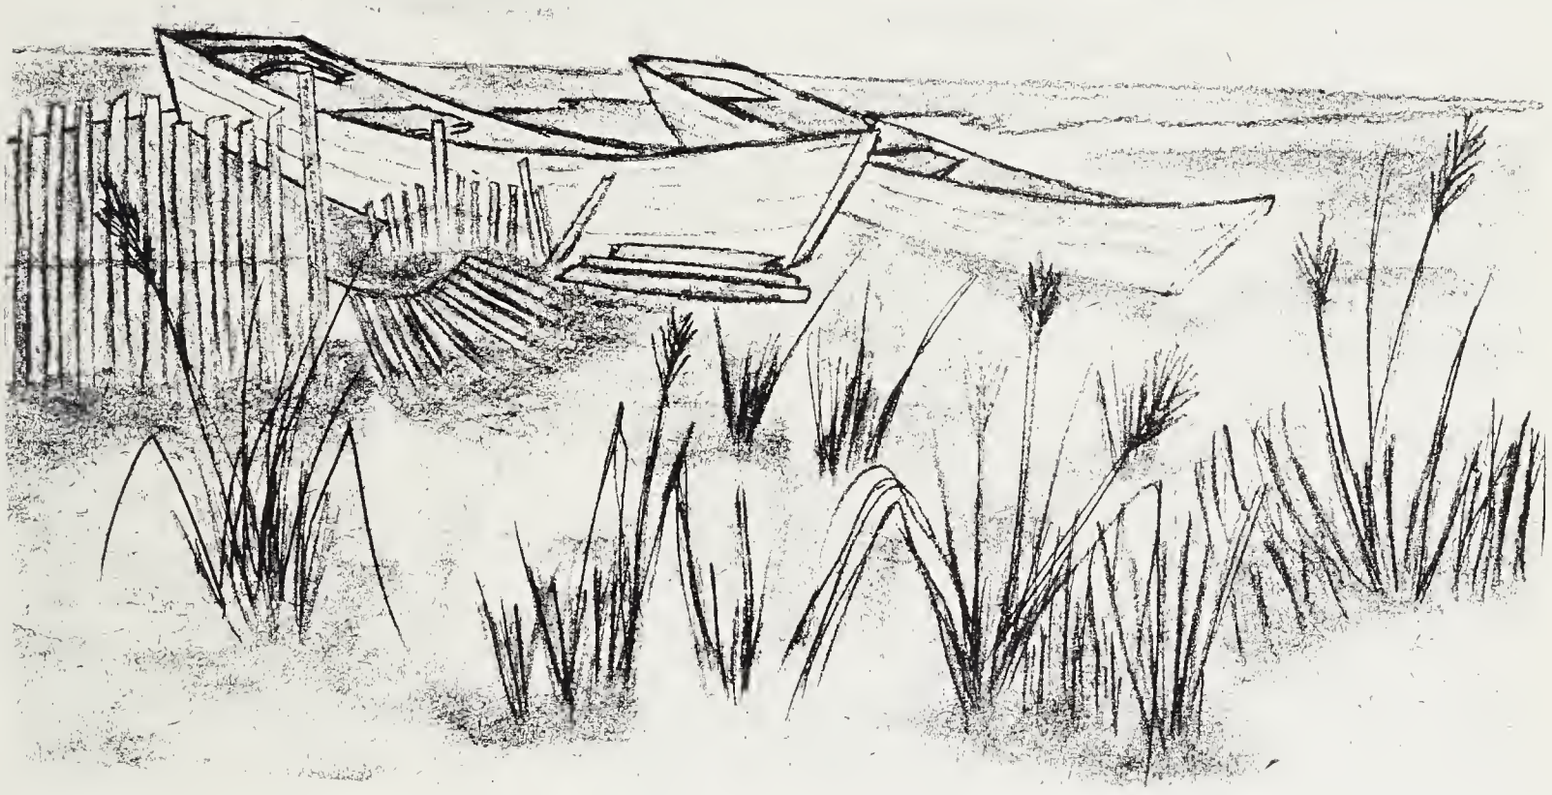
Survivors

The sound of a flute haunts
The City.
Oh,
For no reason.
But, then, of course,
There is no reason these days.
There's not much of anything
Left.
Only a few buildings standing.
A streetlamp here
And there.
Broken glass.
What were streets
Now stained
Forever
With brothers' blood.
And me and my
Flute.
We were left.
We alone survive
Together.

—David Walker



SANDNESS

Softly
Have I seen you
In the dark
Of summer's soul
Slowly
Moving gently —
Sad in rhythm
Like a meadow of sandness
So did you fall
Like a tiny pine
Needle upon needle
Softness upon sand.

—Mary Faeth Chenery

JOHNNY REVERE THE HOT RODDER

Now listen my children and you shall hear
Of the dangerous rides of Johnny Revere.
He awoke in the morning with the roosters and fryers,
But everybody else, to the smell of his tires.
The one small cop in this little town
Does nothing now, but just hang around.
For all of his tries were completely absurd,
Because nobody could catch Johnny's little T-Bird.

—Travis Rigsbee

THE DOVE

A dove lies wounded on some faraway lake,
Waiting in the last of breathless skies
Until dusk sings a sadder song

Few so rare are found, and kept,
Such mystery beating in her tender heart
And lying there, vunerable to me, yet
Time hums on and pulls our communion apart

What phantomless end of secret does she possess?
Might I never reach the shore with her,
tucked safely under my arm,
Or steal her away, far away
Where time would never find us?

Time was when the water locked in an eternal frost,
When light cut deep and playing on the surface
It could plunge no farther,
And I stood helpless on the shore

Waves bend away from their insane laughter,
Rolling off the curl of sea
As imagination would if it were round;
Dreaming, I think I can reach her
On her island of wonder,
Calling for time to unravel the mystery of sea
I might cast my luck
To watch it float helpless, back to me.

—Carolyn Vaughan

Linda

Although
I saw her but for a fleeting instant,
I love her.

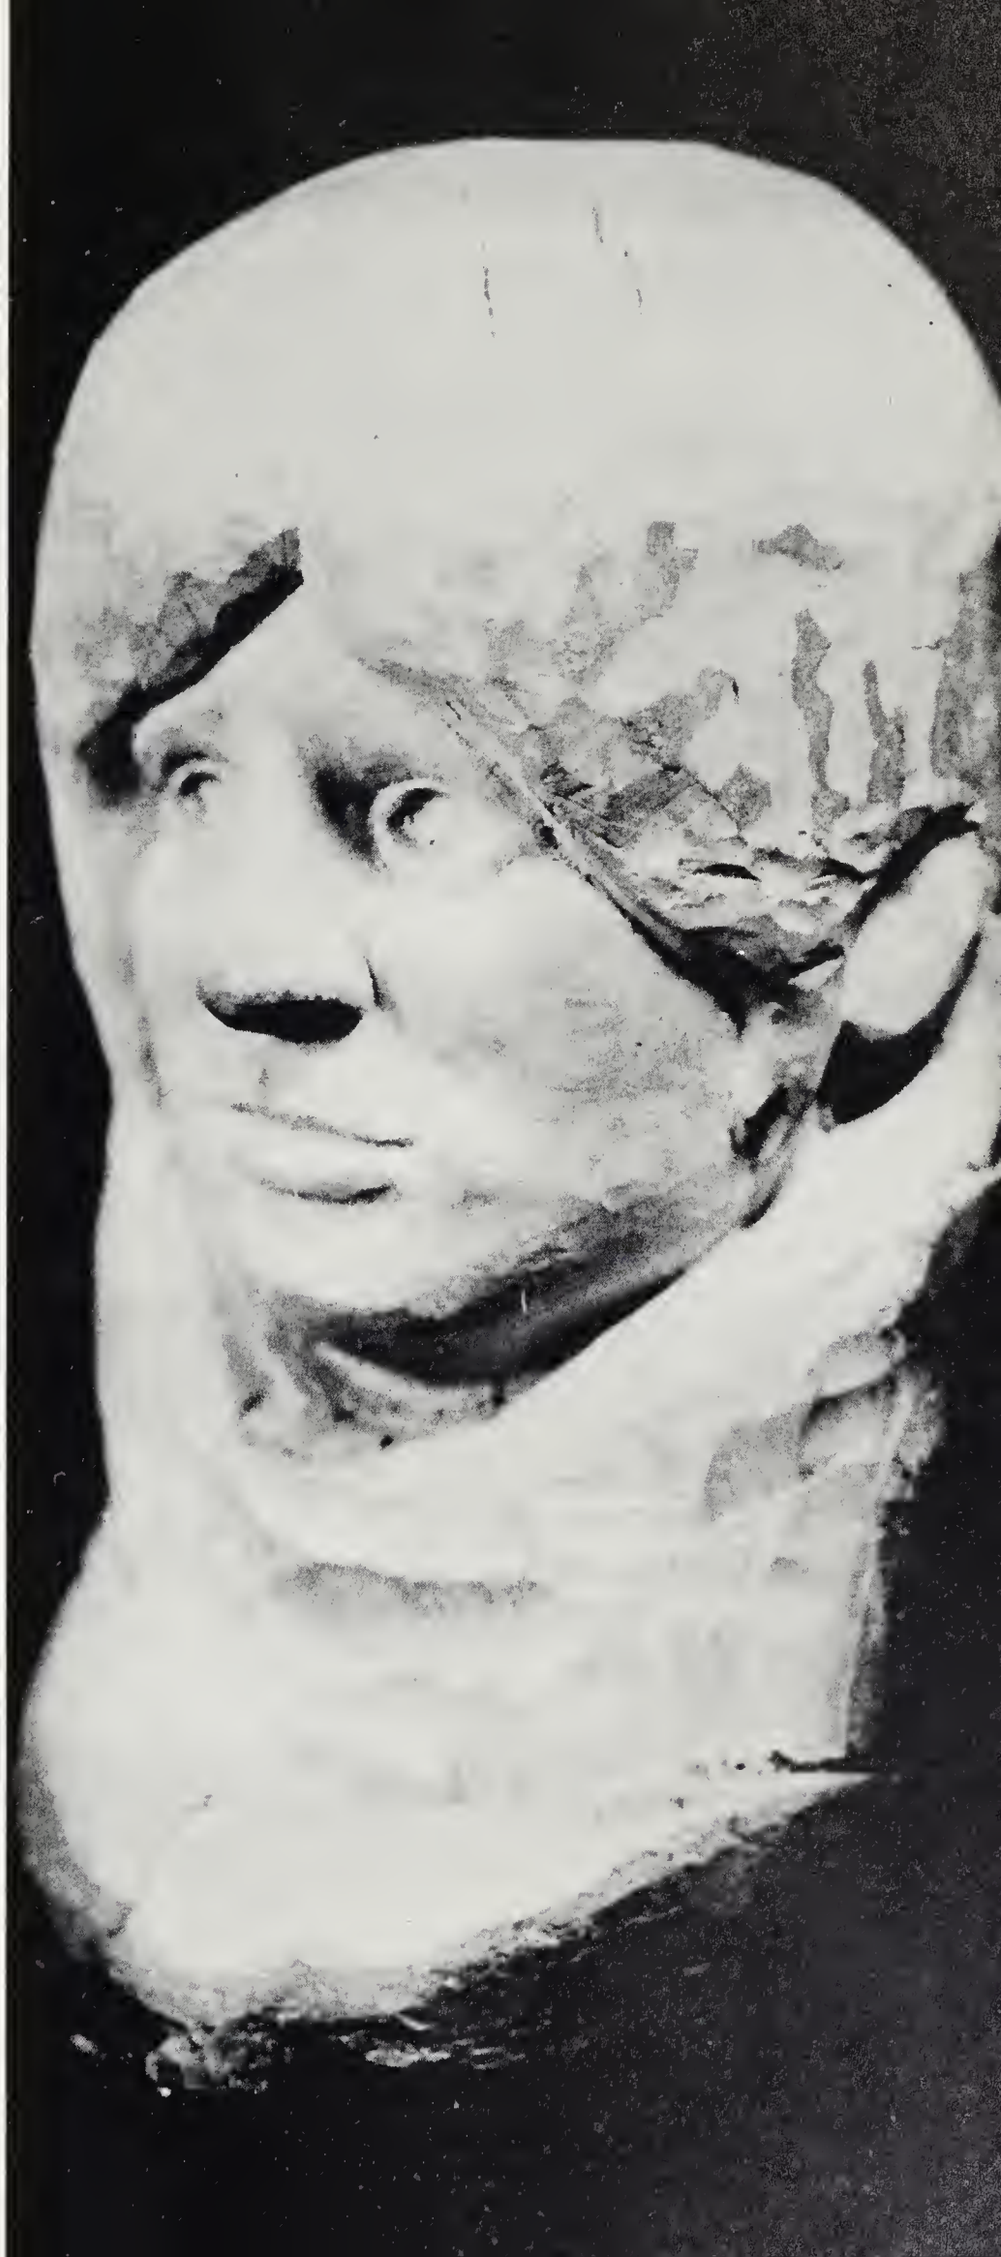
Out from
A train window; a nameless town;
One leg
Hung carelessly on a bicycle;
Her hair
Thick, and though unkept, wavelike
O'er her shoulders.

A young, slight girl, not yet sixteen,
Newfound bosom straining in its halter,
Unseen, untouched; I long for it
To rest my head
Cheeks still rose with the bloom of youth
Such harmony of God's perfection;
Mouth unpainted, face unblemished, yet unkissed;
Such innocence

She looks
At me and I see trust in the world,
Trust in
The honor of men; a chastity
Not yet
Claimed by maturity. Dear God
Don't change her.

Though she
Forgets the moment our eyes met,
I never can.

—Alex Tanford



THE MERRY-GO-ROUND

Dawn breaks . . .
Dawn is still, silent, majestic . . .
Dawn permits no whispers, no echoes, no sighs . . .
Then, suddenly, profanely,
Sacrilegiously,
A brazen lark shatters dawn
With
one brave
note . . .

Morning comes,
And with it,
A gentle sun.

And with the gentle sun's arrival,
Earth awakes
And shakes away
The tousled night of God's contrival.
The sun has been told to await the moon,
But the moon does not come.
The sun is impatient.
The sun grows steadily more angry,
Finally the sun explodes
In fiery fury.
His incensed rays rebuke the Earth
As if it were
Her fault.

Evening arrives
With the advent of the lazy moon.
The moon drifts through darkening skies,
And takes the place of the pacified sun.
God begins to knit the web of night
As cover for the drowsy Earth.

Night falls.

Earth begins her slumber,
And Man begins his dreams.
Gradually, subtly,
Earth
slows
down.
And waits,
Waits until

Dawn breaks . . .

The Outer Bank

The marshes lay like a ruffled, rust rug after a party
An occasional spilled drink
Seeping into the fibers
And ashes muting it in places to shadow.
The only definite object
The Road,
A seemingly infinite smear of gray.
The pavement fell to rolling brine and shoals of rock and sand,
The wind rose in back in strength and coolness, and white-capped swells ridged the land and broke
Into angry indolence against the wall
Stretching into the eye, the sea.
Reaching, like a bridge
A boat.
A barge.
Abandoned, alone to sink and fill and stop
Caught in shifting bottom sands.
A fortress of barnacled strength, a shell without occupant.
Waiting
Willing Taking me.

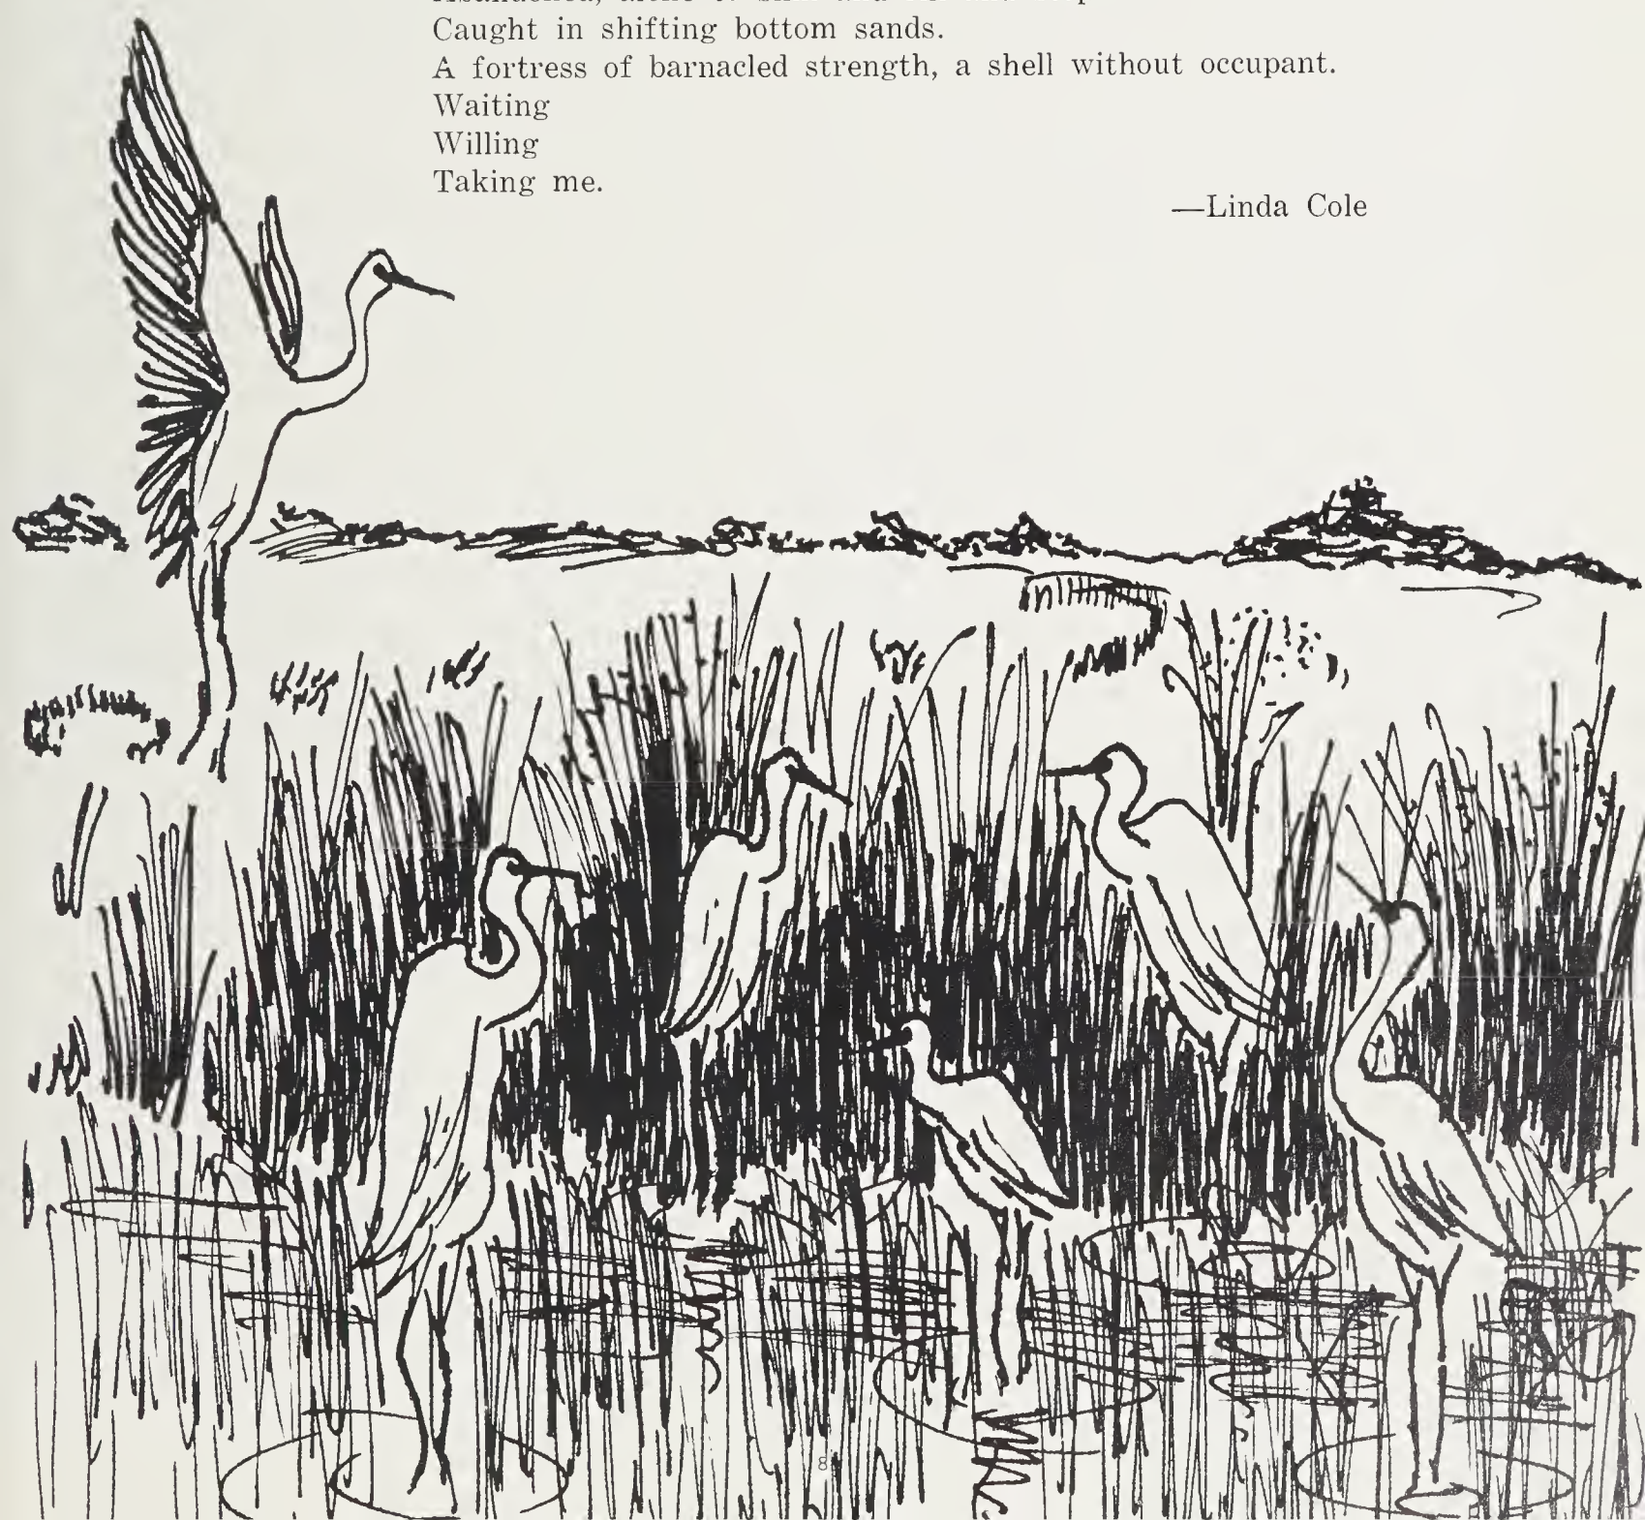
—Linda Cole



TWILIGHT

Ensconced in thought, I sat watching the sky gently parting the leaves of the elegant old maples, like a child searching the grass for hidden eggs.

A warm summer's breath blew dusk over the park, softly clothing the city in a twilight gray.

It was twilight, the whispering voice of the day calling all to rest.

It was twilight, the gentle caress of God's hand on the mind of man.

It was twilight, the loveliest part of the day.

I thought of other such hours.

I stood on the bridge of a ship at sea as the sun, with the grace of a maiden, pulled a curtain of lavender and pink over a day of War.

I bowed near a grave as the Spanish moss swayed softly in the breeze of twilght, I again felt the pat of my father's hand.

My thoughts wondered slowly thru a rich grove of memories, picking one here and one there. It was twilight, that beautiful time when all thought is free.

"This my soul", said
the day —
"enjoy its immaculateness —
your best was enough —
be satisfied and rest."
"Rest — relax — reflect —
recall,
moments of the past

most serene of all."

Still under the opiate of twilight, I watched the young lovers, with their arms entwined, speak not with words of their mouths, but with their eyes.

I watched the old couples slowly pass in mumbling softness. It was evening time, that wonderful time of the day when all is understood.

The park had slowly filled, every bench felt the warmth of relaxing bodies.

How alike are people, I thought; this could be Paris, Rome, or Rio. Twilight is the same.

Over the soft bass of the quiet voices floated the strum of a banjo. I was home, these were my people, this was North Carolina, this was New York, this was Washington Square at twilight.

THE SKY WAS BLUE

A soft brown nose inquired into the state of things.

"Hello fella."

He began to nibble at the straw that she had been sleeping on.

"Yeah. Yeah, I get the hint old man," she chuckled. She sat up and stretched. "That, sir, was a good nap . . . Hey ya, want to go riding?"

She fetched the bridle and slipped it over his head. She swung up Indian fashion onto his broad bare back.

"Charge sir." She squeezed him gently with her knees.

The woods were still bright with the autumn leaves. Little River ambled by. They clattered over the bridge and wandered across the meadow. Diablo cropped the grass absently. The meadow was watching the sun set. It fell slowly below the rim of Piney Mountain. Dusk had come. It was time to go.

"Home 'James.'" She leaned forward and held on as he broke into a fast canter. They raced through the tall meadow grass and into the trees. The still woods echoed with hoof beats. The tatoo resounded from the bridge and bounced back from the hillsides. They were filled with the joy of youth and strength and love. Up the hill they clattered and across the field towards the pasture. Faster, free-er, gayer — Suddenly a shot rang out. The horse collapsed in mid-stride and the rider was thrown hard to the ground. Both lay very still.

In the half-light a hunter crossed the field to look at his buck.
